So when do you wrap up over there?	I'm wrapping up over here in a couple of weeks — just a few loose ends left.
Are you heading back for good this time?	Yeah, this time it's for good. No more going abroad.
Wait, so you're not coming back to Norway at all?	Not only am I wrapping up the job, I'm also heading back for good.
How do you feel about leaving Norway?	Honestly, I've got mixed feelings about it, but it's time.
Come on, you must be a little torn about it.	I am. Turns out wrapping up the job was the easy part — leaving everyone is harder.
Looking back, would you have timed it differently?	Had I known I'd feel this torn, I would've wrapped things up months ago.

Where are you going to live once you're back?	That's the thing — I'm still on the fence about where to live.
Are you really moving back in with your parents?	Yeah, I'm moving back in with my parents for a bit, just till I get on my feet.
Isn't that a little rough at thirty?	Sure, but it's only for a while. I'd rather do that than rush into a lease.
Are you still on the fence about it?	A little. I'll move back in with my parents — that part's settled — but what I can't figure out is how long before I go out on my own.
Did you run the whole thing by anyone before deciding?	I talked it over with Jake before I decided anything — he keeps me honest.
And what did Jake say?	He told me to sleep on it, so I did. Didn't change my mind much, though.

What's your first move — the tutoring offer or going out on your own?	I'm leaning toward going out on my own and tutoring privately.
Have you figured it out yet?	Not really — I haven't figured it out yet, to be honest.
So what's actually holding you back?	I keep second-guessing the decision, even though part of me knows it's the right call.
Any regrets about how you handled the whole thing?	None, really. I wrapped up the job, I'm heading back for good — the rest I'll figure out as I go.

Wymowa (powtórka — pułapki):

- wrap /ræp/ — „w” NIEME, brzmi jak „rap”.
- second-guess /ˌsek.ənd ˈges/ — akcent na GUESS; „gues”, nie „dżes”. Łączy się w jedno: „sekend-ges”.
- mixed feelings — „-ed” jak słyszalne „t” bez sylaby: „mikst-fiilingz”.
- What I can't... — w mowie zlewa się: „wɒd-aj-kænt”; nie rozdzielać sztywno „what ... I”.

Typowe błędy Polaka:

- for good = „na stałe / na dobre”, nigdy „korzystnie / na lepsze” (fałszywy przyjaciel: good ≠ better).
- talk it over → z konkretną osobą zawsze with Jake / with someone, nie to someone.
- second-guess to wątpić we WŁASNAĄ decyzję, nie „zgadywać po raz drugi”; pisane z łącznikiem.
- Had I known... = inwersja warunkowa = „gdybym (wtedy) wiedział”; NIE dopisuj if („If had I known” to błąd).
- Not only am I... wymaga inwersji (am I, nie „I am”) na początku zdania.
